CHARLOTTESVILLIE, VA., July 7.—The first business session of the third annual convention of the Virginia State Teachers' Association was held this morning in the senior law lecture room at the University of Virginia, the body having been formerly welcomed to the University last night by President Alderman at the joint meeting of the Co-operative Education Commission and State Teachers' Association.

The association, which was organized for the special purpose of improving the conditions for public education in the State, of developing the schools themselves, and of elevating the standard of the profession of teaching, now includes in its membership all classes of Virginia teachers, from the university to the primary schools. It represents between primary schools. It represents between 2,500 and 3,000 members in the various local associations, (hough membership in treated by Superintendent G. H. Hulvey, of Rockingham county, a candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The night session was held in the University auditorium, and was largely attended by the teachers of the Summer School of Methods, as well as by the delegates to the association. The principal speaker was Dr. Lyon G. Tyler, president of William and Marxy, College, and member of the State Board of Education. His subject was "Money—How It May be Employed to Strengthen the Public School System of Virginia." Dr. Tyler began by dwelling upon the idea of money in its spiritual character as a force representaspiritual character as a force representa tive of all the forces entering into so Accordingly, money is either a or evil force, according to the man-in which it is employed. Money improperly or wastefully applied is corrupting and destructive of the ends of good government, but discreetly and wisely used is the life force of all social institutions, educational or otherwise. Dr. Tyler touched upon some points in connection with the school system in which money might be used to advantage. Under the present laws power was given to the State Board of Education to appoint superintendents of schools, but the Legislature fixed the salaries. This was wrong in principle, for the superintendents were the immediate representatives of the State Board, and salaries should be fixed by the appointing power. One of the great evils of the public schools was inadequate and inefficient supervision arising from small salaries, which superintendents of schools were forced to supplement by engaging in other employments at the expense of the State. In the same manner, the county school trustees were deprived of the natural authority incident to their responsibilities in not having the power to direct the levy of taxes within the limit authorized by law. Dr. Tyler wanted the laws to be amended in these respects; and he saw in the surplus of 1750,000, which will be available at the next Legislature, an immense opportunity for the development of the public schools properly or wastefully applied is cor-rupting and destructive of the ends of spects; and he saw in the surplus of 755,000, which will be available at the rext Legislature, an immense opportunity for the development of the public schools of the Commonwealth, which should not be allowed to pass unimproved. A large portion of this surplus should be laid aside to provide properly equipped school houses in the counties, and instead of reducing taxes, which has been always the politician's remedy for a surplus, the annual surplus accruing in future years should be devoted to upbuilding the schools by giving proper salaries to now wretchedly paid teachers. Dr. Tyler declared, in conclusion, that Virginia was on the crest of a great wave of prosperity, and drew an anthusiastic picture of a great and prosperous Commonwealth, with a high school in every county and a system or common schools running for nine months in the year, and officered by a happy, intelligent body of teachers diffusing about them a light of morality, education and civilization.

Professor A. M. Soule, of the Virginia. Polyteshor A. M. Sunis, of the virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, followed Dr. Tyler in an interesting discourse on "Agriculture in the Public Schools," which he illustrated by various viercepticon views, His lecture was greatly enjoyed by the audience.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK

Rocks Piled in a Switch Near Station at Middle-

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) WINCHESTER, VA., July 7 .- Passen gers on east bound Baltimore and Ohio train No. 8, due here at 9:15 A. M., say that a bold attempt was made to wreck the train at Middletown, Frederick county, this morning about twelve miles south of Winchester. According to the version of several passengers, large version of several passengers, large rocks had been placed in a switch near the station at Middletown, and had the train been running at full speed a disastrous wreck could not have been averted. As it was, the engineer saw the obstruction in time to bring his train to a standstill just as the wheels of the engine crashed into the rocks, some of which had been driven between the rails and others piled on the track.

An early freight train had passed Middletown a short time before the east bound train reached there, and at that time the track was clear. It is understood that railroad detectives, who have for several months past been working on the series of attempts to wreck trains on the Valley Division of the Baltimore and Ohio between Winchester and Kernstown, and who several weeks ago arrested Oscar W. Bromley, an Insane youth, as the culprit, have been ordered hack to make an investigation of today's attempt.

The detectives have no clue to the

The Governor explained his attitude towards Confederate soldier pengion bill, stating that he favored and signed a bill which provided $300,000 for pensions, and added that he vetoed a resolution which provided for laying aside $300,000 for pensions, because that resolution did not appropriate anything for pensions, but ited up that sum without giving Confederate soldiers anything, and that after he had vetoed this resolution the above bill was passed and signed by him.

He declared that he favored national appropriations for roads, so the farmers could have good roads to haul their produce to markets; said he had no machine, but was submitting his candidacy to the people and that if elected he would perform the dutiles of the office to the best of his abilities.

He declared that department work was only a part of the Senator's duties.

He declared that department work was only a part of the Senntor's duties. He denied that he had dealt in personalities, but had discussed to the people the public record of Senator Martin, which he had a right to do, and which the people had a right to know about. It was a record breaking day here for Montague, and on all sides the people are saying the Governor made many friends and votes, and his friends say be will carry Warren by a handsome he will carry Warren by a handsome majority. CAPT. MORRIS, ESCAPED LUNATIC, ON RIVERTUG

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
NORFOLK. VA., July 7.—A man rowed alongside the tug Sallie, of Norfolk, Captain Walter Marshall commanding, as she lay at Jamestown Island, Iwo days ago, and said that he wanted to be towed to Norfolk in the skiff in which he was. The tug men goodnaturedly agreed to low him, especially since they recognized him as Captain J. C. Morris, of Richmond, a well-known boatman.

He was invited aboard the tug, and the skiff was towed behind. During the yoyage Captain Morris confided to the tag men that he had escaped from the Bate insane asylum at Williamsburg some ten days previously, and exhibited a small steel instrument, by means of which he said he had opened several locks and pried off the transom above his door. He seemed harmless and the tug men entertained him two days.

He was delivered to the officers at Newport News to be returned to Williamsburg. He declared he had never had such a good time in his life.

TWO MEN DROWNED AT FERRY CROSSING

A Minister Does Heroic Work in Saving Other People.

General to The Times-Dispatch.)
GHATHAM, VA., July 7.—James Pannell, colored, ferryman, and Hampton Oakes, white, were drowned at Fowler Ferry Thursday while ferrying a pariy across Staunton River. Walter Johnson, a Christian minister, and Mr. Fergusson and bride, whom the minister had married only a short while before, narrowly escaped a watery grave. The boat had just started from the landing when the cable connecting the rear end with the cable coverhead broke, and the boat was turned with the current of the stream. Water commenced to pour over the sides. Oakes and the ferryman became alarmed and leaped into the water, going out of sight in a few minutes.

Johnson at a giance took in the perilous situation, and climbing to the overhead cable succeeded in carrying the boat across by very hard work. Fergusson's horse and buggy were washed overboard and drowned. The minister's horse was carried overboard, and later rescued by Johnson, when the other side was reached.

The occupants were almost out of sight: The minister fell in a swoon from exhaustion. The bride and groom were very much frightened, but uninjured. Oakes leaves a widow and two children.
